RESPECTFUL MATERNITY CARE
THE UNIVERSAL RIGHTS OF CHILDBEARING WOMEN

Motherhood is a social justice and human rights issue.

In every country and community worldwide, pregnancy and childbirth are momentous events in the lives of women and families, representing a time of great joy, but also intense vulnerability. The concept of ‘safe motherhood’ is usually restricted to physical safety, but childbirth is also an important rite of passage, with deep personal and cultural significance for women and their families.

Because motherhood is specific to women, issues of gender equity sit at the core of maternity care. The notion of safe motherhood must be expanded beyond the prevention of morbidity or mortality to encompass respect for women’s basic human rights, including respect for women’s autonomy, dignity, feelings, choices, and preferences, including decisions about who is present at birth.

All childbearing women deserve respectful care and protection; this includes special care to protect the mother-baby union as well as women in cases of heightened vulnerability, for example adolescents, ethnic minorities, and women living with physical or intellectual disabilities or HIV.

Its Universal Rights of Childbearing Women Charter addresses the disrespect and abuse to which women seeking maternity care are sometimes subjected. It provides a platform for change via:

- Raising public awareness regarding the inclusion of childbearing women’s rights in the human rights guarantees recognised in internationally adopted United Nations and other multinational declarations, conventions, and covenants;
- Highlighting the connection between human rights language and key program issues relevant to maternity care;
- Increasing the capacity of maternal health advocates to participate in human rights processes;
- Aligning childbearing women’s sense of entitlement to high-quality maternity care with international human rights community standards; and
- Providing a basis for holding the maternal care system and communities accountable to these rights.
Human Rights are recognised by societies and governments around the globe and are enshrined in international declarations and conventions. Bowser and Hill (2010) described seven major categories of disrespect and abuse that childbearing women encounter during maternity care. These categories occur along a continuum from subtle disrespect and humiliation to overt violence:

- Physical abuse
- Non-consented clinical care
- Non-confidential care
- Non-dignified care (including verbal abuse)
- Discrimination based on specific patient attributes
- Abandonment or denial of care
- Detention in facilities

Until now, no instrument has specifically delineated how human rights are implicated in the childbearing process or affirmed their application to childbearing women as basic, inalienable rights. The White Ribbon Alliance for Safe Motherhood is promoting respectful maternity care through tackling disrespect and abuse defining the Seven Rights of Childbearing Women, in seeking and receiving maternity care.

Every woman has the right to:

1. Freedom from harm and ill treatment
2. Information, the right to provide informed consent and refusal to consent, and respect for choices and preferences, including companionship during maternity care
3. Privacy and Confidentiality
4. Dignity and respect
5. Equality, freedom from discrimination and access to equitable care
6. Healthcare and the highest attainable level of health
7. Liberty, autonomy, self-determination, and freedom from coercion

The seven rights are drawn from the categories of disrespect and abuse identified by researchers and rights advocates in the current literature. By drawing on relevant extracts from established human rights instruments, the Charter demonstrates the legitimate place of maternal health rights within the broader context of human rights.

All rights are grounded in established international human rights instruments, including the Universal Declaration of Human Rights; the Universal Declaration on Bioethics and Human Rights; the International Covenant on Economic, Social and Cultural Rights; the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights; the Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women; the Declaration of the Elimination of Violence Against Women; the Report of the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Human Rights on preventable maternal mortality and morbidity and human rights; and the United Nations Fourth World Conference on Women, Beijing. National instruments are also referenced if they make specific mention of childbearing women.

Safe Motherhood for All calls for maternity care that is comprehensive, participatory, rights based, using evidence-based best practice.

Safe Motherhood for All, now and into the future, because healthy women make healthy babies make healthy nations.
